Eloquent Tributes of Col. Thomas Smith and Mr. Leigh Robinson.

removed from the first battle of the invasion, and at Five Forks, the last engagement of the cavalry, he was the glory of shedding his blood for his State at her gateway and at her grave. Disabled by wounds and long a prisoner, he was a hero in the eyes of the world, and on his additional renown was assured him promotion, in the display of those qualities that proved him not only a fighter to thrill followers but a commander to plan campaigns and conduct them. He was, however, though at the disadvantage of constrained absence from the fields of active service, a general of the great Lee to command his division with the sword of a major-general.

His love of contest was almost recklessness, but it was electric and stimulated his men to elan that on many Commander and comrades, I now deliver to you as tribute of the affection and admiration of those to whom he was dearest, representation of General William H. Payne, and congratulate you all upon the accession of this picture of this noble soldier to the grand galaxy in this hall of heroes.

It may be that from the battlements beyond the skies, where our reincarnated heroes are assembled, under the Stars and Bars, he is witnessing the homage rendering to his memory to-
